

Remodeling FAQs

Q: Will the remodeling process be stressful?

A: There is, of course, a certain amount of stress “built-in” to the remodeling process. After all, a key area of your home is out of commission for at least a little bit of time, and a certain amount of noise comes with the territory.

BUT your remodeling company should always do three things to make this process more enjoyable and less stressful:

- The installers need to be mindful to minimize the impact on you. Control dust. Clean-up each day. Be polite. These little things add up to a big difference.
- Have a well-designed, well-thought out process. Remodeling only gets super-stressful when your remodeling company does not have a plan and things get chaotic. With us, every step of the way is mapped out in an orderly way, guaranteeing we get you to the finish line without the hassle.
- Deliver a great result. Nothing makes you forget about a few inconveniences faster than a beautiful new space in your home!

Q: How much should I pay for a remodel?

A: We have created a special page on our website to answer this question. You can click here to visit that page.

By the way, in remodeling the old saying “you get what you pay for” is true. Costs will always be a factor, but judging completely on price alone can lead to disappointing results.

Q: Will a remodel add value to my home?

A: According to hard data collected annually by Remodeling Magazine in their respected Cost Vs. Value Report, upgrading your home can significantly increase home value.

One of the useful features of this report is it allows the data to be sorted by city. You can use this link to see data from the Pittsburgh area. As you will see, the increased value of a home makes the “real” cost of a remodel much less when factored against a rise in home value.
